A Crowning Glory: Austerlitz 1815

This two-player grand-tactical simulation by Ty Bomba presents the battle generally considered to have been Napoleon's greatest victory.

Rating: Not Rated Yet Price Base price with tax

Sales price £32.95

Ask a question about this product

Description

Even weeks before Trafalgar, by August 1805 the newly crowned Emperor Napoleon ler, had come to understand his plans required action on land. More specifically, he had to defeat his continental enemies in order to secure his continued power. Britain, Russia and Austria (collectively known as the "Third Coalition") were allied against him and, since he couldn't get at the British on their island fortress, and Russia was too far away to allow for the required quick victory, he was left with invading Austria.

supply line. He also appeared to be slightly outnumbered by a Coalition army made up of the remnants of Austrian forces, plus a sizable Ru des with the French player. His opt ds the Au

ne. It was...a crov ers have the opportunity to attack and defend, but the main burden of the offensive battle generally considered to have been Napoleon's greatest victory. Both play s and divisions on each side. Each full turn represents one hour of 'real time.'

wo-player grand-tactical sin ite side. The infantry and r ing Glory and issue #57 of ATO: One full color 22" x 34" hex mapsheet. lers - 216 full color 9/16" die-cut pieces length - 12 pages - 2 pages

// //

ents 600 vards (~550 m